

Meg Evans Smith Science Writer

Web site: The Science Type
LinkedIn: Meg Evans Smith
E-mail me @ The Science Type
Printable resume

I write stories that I hope will inform, enlighten, entertain, and inspire people to learn about all kinds of science. Astronomy, space exploration, space weather, climate change, women in STEM, and wildlife are just a few of my favorite topics.

Freelance Writing

- Currently writing a feature-length science column called Sci-Town for the bi-weekly Evanston RoundTable newspaper in Evanston, Illinois. (Links to select Evanston RoundTable articles here.)
- Feature articles and personal essays published in the Chicago Tribune, National Safety Council quarterly magazine, Chicago Parent, Today's Chicago Woman, The Parenting Newsletter. (Links to select articles here.)
- Christmas-Hanukkah essay published at OnBeing.org

Education

Northwestern University School of Professional Studies — Evanston, Illinois 2006 to present

- Major: Social Science Minor: Journalism
- Currently enrolled in Bachelor of Science in General Studies (BSG) program.

Columbia College — Chicago, Illinois 1986 to 1991

- Major: Science Journalism
- Generously mentored by one of my instructors, Chicago Tribune science writer Peter Gerner, which led to some of my articles and essays being published in Chicago Tribune.